ABOUT THE UNIVERSITY

The European Research University (ERUNI) is a distinguished non-governmental, non-profit organisation primarily focused on providing accredited undergraduate and postgraduate degree programmes, as well as non-degree and lifelong learning programmes. Founded on the principles of openness, inclusivity, equality, and respect for individual needs, the ERUNI is dedicated to delivering education based on a non-profit model. The University holds the status of a Recognised Teaching Centre of the University of London and comprises five constituent parts, including faculties primarily focused on degree programmes and related research activities, as well as colleges dedicated to professional studies and lifelong learning or non-degree programmes.

It also encompasses additional organisational units providing tertiary education in accordance with Czech law and works closely with educational institutions within the PRIGO educational group. The University, together with the entire ERUNI group, thus educates approximately 3,200 students, upholding its commitment to excellence in education and research while fostering social responsibility and international collaboration.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON STUDY PROGRAMMES

The European Research University has been granted the prestigious status of a Recognised Teaching Centre of the University of London. This designation empowers the ERUNI to deliver internationally acclaimed academic programmes from one of the world's foremost universities. Students are formally registered with the University of London, which awards their degrees at graduation ceremonies held in London. However, face-to-face teaching is conducted at the ERUNI by its fully accredited academic staff, who also provide tailored preparation for admission processes.

As a Recognised Teaching Centre, the ERUNI offers more than just academic excellence. Students benefit from a vibrant university environment on a state-of-the-art campus, enriched by opportunities to build lasting social connections. The centre fosters a dynamic and inclusive international community, supporting both academic and extracurricular activities designed to cultivate personal growth and professional readiness.
